There is a Suspicion, However, That When the Bank's Dealings in Mortgages Are Exmined Other Thefts May Appear - Westervelt's Insinuations-He Is Still in Jail.

The bank examiners for the State of New Jersey, being strictly law-abiding oitizens, observed the Saturday half-holiday law by stopping all examination of the books of the Dime Savings Institution of Newark promptly at noon yesterday. It will be continued to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock. At the time the examination was interrupted it had been determined that Charles R. Westervelt, the former secretary and treasurer of the bank, had embezzled $40,474.12 of the bank's this amount $3,000 was taken from the general cash of the bank and $37,474.12 from the accounts of ten depositors. The examiners say, and the officers of the bank agree with them, that unless it is found that the bank's mortgage account has been tampered with, the amount above mentioned ill represent the bank's total loss. If that be true, the dipositors will be paid in full and the bank's surplus will be impaired only to the amount of a little over $20,000. The surplus which the examiners say is intact, amounts to $108,647.87. Deduct from this the am unt of the embezzlement thus far detected, $40,474 12, and the institution would still have a surplus of $63,173.75 after all depositors have been paid in full and bank's general cash has made right. But Westervelt was under a bond of $20,000, furnished by the American Surety Company, and this reduces the embezzlement by that sum. Therefore, if no more thefts are detected, all de ositors will be paid in full and the bank's surplus will be impaired only to the extent of $20,474.12, which would leave a surplus to res me business with of $88,173.75.

What is regarded as a curious feature of Westervelt's embezzlement is that, aside from the thoft of $3,000 from general cash, he confined his operations to the falsif; ing of the accounts of only ten of the nearly 10,000 depositors. Of these ten, he appears to have raised the withdrawal drafts of two. These two vere Pauline Reube and F. K. Carson. In the care of Mrs. Roube, he raised a draft on July 3, the day the examination of the books began, from $200 to $1,200. On the same day he raised a draft drawn by Carson from $15 to $2.015. With the other eight accounts with which he tampered, Westervelt, so far as has been determin d thus far, simply stole the money and then decreased the credit balances on the books by the amount of his steamers. books by the amount of his stealings in are. The accounts tampered with and ounts stolen from the bank in each case of date of the thefts are as follows, all hin the present year;

Dowd, May 29 Dowd, June 15 Dowd, June 15 Dowd, June 28

He himself told officers of the board the cay he was arrested that he badn't been speculating. In connectin with this a statement from the bank examiners may be recalled. They stated on Friday, and repeated it vesterday, that a more careful examination of the books would probably show that on the dates given in the list printed above Westervelt had simply falsified the books to conform to past falsifications list printed above Westerveit had simply falsided the books to conform to past falsifications and that it would be found, possibly, that the falsification had been going on for years.

Shortly after his arrest, by way of accounting for the money that had gone, Westerveit said that when the investigation was all over it would be found that he hat not profited, to the extent of a dollar by the bank's losses, and he also three out institution were as deep in the mud as he was in the mire. Members of the bank's board of managers took it, from these insimuations, that Westerveit was trying to throw dirt at the bank's President, Mr. James D. Orton, who is also President of the Second National Bank of Newark, and at the two other men employed in the savings bank.
The managers were highly indignant at these insinuations, and one of them, Mr. E. D. Farnsworth, told Westerveit that he was an ungratfullar.

Besides Westerveit, there were just three worth, told Westervelt that he was an ungrateful lar.

Besides Westervelt there were just three men who had what rought be called an Intimate knowledge of the affairs of the institution. One of these is Mr. Orton, who had a general supervision of the bank's business, looked after the loansan the saced upon the securities. The other two ac Robert Hensler and Julius Ven Vagenen, toth of whom assisted at the bookkeeping, and Hensler besides was at times at the teller's window. Mr. Orton is one of the most weal hy and one of the most bighly respected citizens of Newark. The Second National Bank of which he is President is in no way involved in the difficulties of the savings bank, and the account which the savings bank had with the Second National has been found to be intact. While Mr. Orton is inclined to smile at the institutions of Westervelt, who owes what he was before his embezzlement to Orton, the friends of the latter are highly indignant and they took great pleasure yesterday in branding Westervit as a ligrand a cut. As for Hensler friends of the latter are highly indignant and they look great pleasure yesterday in branding Westerv. It as a liar and a cur. As for Hensler and Van Wagenen, Mr. Orton says that they had no hand in Westervelt's stealings. Heusler admits making some of the false entries, but he says he made them by Westervelt's direction and the bank's officers believe him; and, what is more, they believe implicitly in his honesty. Westervelt is still in hall and it was said there vesterday that he has given up the thought of finding (ail. Reference has been made to the possibility of the discovery of a further shortage when the bank's mortgage secount is examined. This statement was made on the authority of Thomas K. Johnston, Deputy Commissioner of Banking. The bank has loans outstanding, secured by mortgages on the park of the discourse of the property in Newark, the Oranges and in other near hy referty in Newark, the Oranges and in the by towns to the amount of $275,000. appraised value of the property on which loans were made is $050,000. Payments of the loans were made is $450,000. Payments of interest and principal on these mortgages were made to Westervelt. Mr. Johnston found this out yesterday, and immediately sent notices to the mortgages at one the table and the sent as soon as possible, that it might be determined whether or not the credits on the books of interest and principal correspond with the credits on the mortgages.

At a meaning of the Board of Managers on friday night Erwin D. Farnsworth, the cashier of the Second National Bank, was elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Dime Savings Institution, to succeed Westervelt, whose resignation was accepted. At this meeting it was decided, in order to guard against the possibility of Westervelt's getting off on the one charge of forging a draft to charge him with a more serious offence. Accordingly, John H. Meeker, counsel for the bank, drew up a comptaint yesterday morning before Judge George H. Lambert, in the First Precinct i clice court, charging Westervills in the forgery and embezglement to the

GOV. ROOSEVELT AT WORK.

Getting Through Piles of Mail Before Starting on His Western Journey.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., July 14.-An accumulation of mail and correspondence kept Gov. Roosevelt busy to-day. Assisted by his stenographer, he made inroads on several heaps of mail matter that would have been appalling to a man of less energy. He also found time to entertain at hincheon Assemblyman A. W. Cooley of West Chester, who made a social call. Late in the day the Governor accompanied by his notes and his stenographer went to the improvised headquarters in the bank building in this village, where he spent the rest of the day and evening. THE MOONACHIE SUICIDE.

Woman Who Jumped Through a Forryboa Window Was a Luckless Inventor. Little doubt is felt by the relatives of Miss Giulia B. Jarvis, who lived in this city, that she is the woman who committed suicide from the Hoboken ferryboat Moonachie as it was coming up to its slip at the foot of West Fourteenth street on Friday night. In the pocketbook the woman left behind her when she jumped was a card inscribed "Miss G. B. Jarvis, 125 East Sixteenth street." This is where Miss Giulia Jarvis has been living for the past year. Her cousin, Thomas M. Jarvis of 61 Broadway, called there yesterday and asked that if the body was found he should be notified, as he wishes to take charge of it. He also wishes to ascertain the whereabouts of MissJarvis's sister, who formerly lived in the same boarding house and was em-ployed in the New York office of G. W. Sheldon & Co. of Chicago. Six months ago she left the boarding house and also gave up her place for another. Mr. Jarvis believes that she is still in this city but has not been able to find her as yet. She and a brother. George Jarvis, a railroad man living in Lakewood, a suburb of Chicago, are the nearest living relatives of the Melancholia is believed to be the reason for Miss Jarvis's act. She had always been subject to fits of depression and was regarded by the rest of the family as rather eccentric. Up to two years ago, when she was 38 years old, she had lived at the home of her father, the late Thomas Jarvis, who was in the commission business in Toronto, Canada. Since her girlhood she had been possessed of the idea that she was to be a great inventor and she was constantly experimenting with such machinery as she could lay hands on and often with chemicals, to the alarm of the family. She was of an eccentric disposition and finally left home, saying that she could no longer stay with her family, but would go into the world and make he icritune by her inventions. She came direct to this city and immediately began to visit patent lawyers, inventors and capitalists, with a view to getting them interested in her schemes. Though she talked little about herself in the boarding house, it is said that her attempted inventions were the wildest incossibilities, and so lar as is known she never steegeded in getting anything even patented. She was sometimes reduced to a condition of want and her relatives frequently helped her out. She owed $80 for board at the boarding house where she had been for about a year. Thomas M. Jarvis said to a Stn reporter yesterday:

It is a certainty in my mind that the woman who jumped from the ferryboat is my cousin. The description tallies with her appearance and the card which was found in her pocketbook, giving the name and address, makes it practically certain. She was always eccentric and as invention after invention proved worthless or impracticable she became more and more melancholy. I have not seen her for several months, but the last time I saw her she seemed low-spirited. None of the family ever thought that she was unsound of mind; at the same time it is no great surprise to me that she should have destroyed herself. She was of that temperament. When the body was found, if the police will notify me, I will take charge of it, as I am the nearest male relative in this vicinity.

Addresses of patent lawyers and corporations that handle mechanical inventions chemical formulæ mathematical caculations, and newspacer clippings about various scien, tific discoveries and inventions were found among Miss Jarvis's papers. Her brother, who lives in Chicago, was notified yesterday. He is said to be prosperous.

city. Both are attributed to the careless use of blank cartridges on the Fourth of July. The victims were boys, aged 12 and 17 years respectively. From other sections of the State come reports of deaths from similar causes. At Newbury-port a seventeen-year-old boy was loading a revolver with blank cartridges when the weapon was prematurely discharged, causing a slight wound on one hand. A Boverly laborer was tamring down a wad of green grass in an old musket when the charge exploded and tore away part of his hand. The arm was amputated, but this did not save the man's life. A Quincy boy died Thursday from lockjaw c used by blank cartridges.

Car Cut Off His Toes.

Twelve-year-old Irving Siever of 289 West 154th street, dodged two bleycle riders last night at 154th street and Macomb's Dam road. He slipped, fell, and an Eighth avenue car ran over his left foot, amputating four toes. The boy is now in the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

ALL ABOUT MUSHROOMS.

THERE ARE OVER 6,000 VARIETIES OF WHICH ONLY 300 ARE BDIBLE.

Many of the Nexious Species Produce Inter-ication—The Effect of the Fly-Agaric Net Unlike That of Opium—Queer Auties of Its Victims—Fungi Hunters in New York. The New York Mycological Club is a small but enthusiastic organization that meets, works and plays at the College of Pharmacy. It listens at times to lectures and then on alternate meetings it will vary the monotony of its proceedings by giving chafing-dish demonstrations. These are very popular and inspire the members to go off in the fields and gather edible fungi which are referred to a committee on identification, from whose hands, after the closest scrutiny, they pass into the custody of the Entertainment Committee, which appoints a chafing-dish expert to cook the mushrooms While the other members watch and wait and finally eat, the ninepin-that is, the chafferjoining in, the club also has a serious purpose which is to spread the knowledge of mushrooms among the masses to make more generally known the difference between the edible and the non-edible or poisonous varieties and to point out the great possibilities of deriving nutriment from a steres now greatly neglected. During June, July, August and September the club arranges excursions with various points of destination, the sole object of which "Saturday Outings," as they are called, being to hunt fungi. The club had one of these excursions on Friday.

Truly, one-half the world knows not how the other half amuses itself. It is also true that although there are very many people in the world who have scarcely more than heard of mushrooms, as soon as one begins to study the subject it is surprising how quickly it expands and stretches out. There are, it seems, more than 6,000 varieties of mushrooms, of which 300 are edible. Not all of these are native, however, so that when the President of the club, C. Walter Cushier and his party set out it was not with the expectation of finding the whole of the 6,000 varieties. The chosen hunting ground was in the woods near J. rome Park near Woodlawn Cemetery.

The Fungologists left the trolley cars to the sound of the soft music of the band playing at Van Cortlandt Park. The music rose and fell as they led the highway, boldly ; lunging into the dank woods, whose ambient air wrapped them about. It has not been a very favorable mushroom season this year because of the cryness, so that the speedy discovery of an example of the juiceless Russulla with its dry crumbling fie h was hailed with Shortly after Fistulina hepatica delight. or "Beefsteak Fungus" was encountered growing upon a chestnut stump. ALBIANDER TROUP IN A ROW.

Recigns as Director of Public Works of Nov Haven After a Scrap. NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 14.-Alexander Troup, formerly Democratic National Committeeman of Connecticut, wrote out his resigna-tion as Director of the Public Works of New Haven this afternoon and handed it to Mayor Cornelius T. Driscoll, who had appointed Troup to the best paying office in this city. Mayor Driscoll looked at Troup in amazement as the latter made the following explanation; "Your Superintendent of Sewers, John H Pigott, has been insubord nate to the Department of Public Works and I guess I'll quit." Mayor Driscoll told Director Troup not to be too ha ty about the resign tion and then, much to the aston shment of the Director, tore up the raper containing the resignation and put the bits in the waste basket "There," said the haavor, "just give me a little time to think over this matter before you go any fur-said the Mayor, Just give me a little time to think over this matter before you go any further."

The insubordination which Troup referred to started from the fact that Supt. Pigott of the Sewer Department had docked all the men in that department for the Fourth of July, claiming that Inasmuch as the men had performed no work on the Fourth the: were not entitled to pay. He said that whatever had been the custom of the city in paying menfor holidars hereaft r they would not be paid while he was in authority.

Pigott then began to catechie Troup, and the atter ordered him out of the office. Pigott re used to go and picked up a brice as if he intended to throw it at the Director. Others closing in, Pigott dropped the breken the table. But words followed, in which Pigott told Troup that he was a brute.

Troup again ordered Pigott out of the office and Pigott told Troup to the was making a fool of himself. Pigott finally left the room and Director Troup went to the Mayor with his resignation. Troup declared to-night that he would insist on his resignation on Monday if Mayor Diriscoll failed to remove Surt. Pigott. The latter is the brother of former Congressman James P. Pigott, wholed the opposition of Troup as National Committeeman.

The boys were rusing the yacht's sail when the policemen climbed aboard, drew revolvers and coreed them to surrender. Then the policemen searched the yacht, but found no gold, diamonds, jeweiry or silverware. There was nothing but a lot of fishing tackle.

At the station the prisoners declared that they had made their boasts in a joking spirit and thought to astonish the natives. Father Smith's Housekeeper Reduces Her $4,000 Claim Against His Estate.

GREENWICH, Conn., July 14.-Sorrow over the misfortune of St. Mary's Roman Catholic parish here in losing its church edifice by fire, has caused Miss Bridget Coyle of Pawtucket, R. L. to reduce her claim against the late Father Thomas Smith's estate from $4,000 to $1,000. Smith for nineteen years and when he died last winter she found that he had willed her £2,500 and his how chald goods. The executors of his estate, John Maher and P. T. Mongen, refused to let her have a plano in the parsonage, claiming that it was charch and not personal property. Miss Coyle thereupon put in a bill of $4,000 for her services for nineteen years. While this claim was pending all work on a new parochial school, for which Father Smith left $5,000 was stopped. The fact that a new clurch will now have to be erected caused Miss Coyle to notify Mr. Maher that the would accept $1,000 and a settlement was made to-day. She will also receive the legacy. The star bout at the Greenwood A. C. last night brought together Tim Kearns, the Boston lightweight, and Jim Burke of New York The bout was scheduled to go twenty rounds, and the weight was 185 pounds at the ringside.

The bout ended in the seventh round. Burke was in such bad condition that the referee to save him from further punishment stopped the bout and gave the verdict to Kearns.

Kearns was looked after by Al McMurray, his manager, and Tommy Felz, the Brooklyn bantam. In Burke's corner were Billy Roche and Charley Kelly, the former bout and.

In the opening bout George Schimmerick of Brooklyn met Buck Farney of New York. The conditions were ten rounds at 120 pounds. It was a fast bout, tach man sending home good blows to the face and body. In the third round Shimmerick sent Farley to the floor with a hard swing to the jaw, which came near knocking the latter out. When Farley got to his feet he was very groggy, and with a hard swing to the jaw Shimmerick put Farley to sleep.

In the second preliminary Bobby Reilly of Brooklyn fought Danny McCue, also of Brooklyn, for ten rounds at 114 pounds. The boys put up a fast and interesting bout, wich went the full distance. Reilly got the verdict. the weight was 185 pounds at the ringside.

At Second avenue the boy found Policeman Flagler, who arrested Curtin just as he was boarding a car for downtown. Detectives Finn and Farrell came up shortly afterward and the three took Curtin to the East Fighty-eighth street station. He refused to talk and was taken to Harlem police court and held to await the result of Mrs. Carew's injuries. Mrs. Carew was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, where she identified Curtin as the man who shot her. She will probably die.
